Having an app to perform all the mouse clicks in your place can be quite useful. Aarons Clicker is a nice tool that can help with this issue. The app has a simple interface that should be quite easy to figure out, thanks to the intuitive layout. The program can be used to help to save you the time it takes to click various areas of the screen, but also for various online games where you need to click repeatedly in the same spot. The app can be set to emulate the right or left mouse buttons. Furthermore, you can customize the clicking frequency to the smallest details, especially since it lets you define the interval down to a millisecond. The app comes with multiple sliders for minutes, seconds, deciseconds, centiseconds, as well as milliseconds. You may also adjust the inbuilt time delay that allows you to position the cursor before the program takes over. Furthermore, you can modify the mouse down time. It's extremely easy to start and stop the timer, as you only have to move the mouse to the desired buttons on the interface. The bottom line is that Aarons Clicker is a nice tool that can come in handy on various occasions. Despite the fact that the frame design doesn't stand out in the visual department, it is easy to figure out. Thus, even the less experienced users shouldn't have any difficulties while working with it.
