JOVC is a tool for viewing video streams over the Internet. It allows access to streams by either: playing them in any Java applet or browser plugin; or viewing them in your local Java Web start application. JOVC presents a browsing framework which allows you to browse the WWW pages (HTML content) and the stream content (videos and audio) from files on the server side. You will be able to view:

- over 100 MB of videos from a file on the server side.
- over 100 MB of audio streams.
- over 100MB of images for an image file on the server side. JOVC can also access various RTS streams provided by web sites. Features View media files, both video and audio. Interact with the server through URL parameters and HTTP headers. Browse the WWW using the JOVC browser. Browse a directory on the server using the JOVC File Explorer tool. Download audio files. Stream multiple files from the same server. The JOVC File Explorer tool (JFE) allows you to browse a directory on the server. It allows you to directly play files, or download them. You can change the location of a directory for streaming by pressing the "directory" button and then double clicking on the directory you want. Once you have changed the directory, you can view the selected directory and use the File Explorer tool to play the files. Downloading a file: Press the "download" button and select the file type. JOVC will then download the file to your machine, and it will be located in the Media directory of the directory you selected. There is currently a limit of one download per file. You can select a range of files to download using the "range" button in the download menu. If you are downloading a selected group of images, you can use the "Expand" button to select the start and end of the range of images you want to download. You can use the "Expand" and "Clear" buttons to clear the range. Using the 'send' button, you can send the downloaded file to another JOVC. Use the "Expand" button to expand the range of the current download and the "Clear" to clear the range. You can download a selected range of RTS streams using the "range" button. Stream media files from server JOVC can
